The obsession among Catholics with Fatima has produced an entire industry dedicated to this private revelation. Most of this has gone to people who shouldn't have an influence among Catholics, given their propensity to modernism and faulty theological reasoning. John Salza, a 'former' freemason, published with Robert Siscoe, an insurance lawyer, the book "True or False Pope". It is large tract dedicated to debunking Sedevacantism, even though it is laughably ridiculous in its analysis of the pope question. The book has published by Angelus Press, the publishing house of the priest-pedo outfit SPPX, which claims to be trad and was really founded to make sure people stay with modernist Rome.

Salza has jumped ship, abandoned the SSPX and become a Novus Ordo adherent. In that, it is not surprising. If you say Francis is the pope, it is only logical that you join his religion. All roads lead to Rome, if you are Catholic, the cognitive dissonance the SSPX has brainwashed its cult members with notwithstanding. Thomist philosopher Dr. Peter Chojnowski, who used to be an SSPX fake-trad and is now a Sedevacantist, thanks in part to his research on Fatima, has been on a crusade to get to the bottom of one crucial question: if the children at Fatima, of which Sister Lucy was the only, up until recently, survivor, who to explain her complete support for Vatican II, modernism and the antipopes succeeding Pius XII? How to square that circle?

According to expert research which the Doctor commissioned, it has been confirmed over an over again that the Sister Lucy known to the world after 1960 is not the same Sister Lucy whom we knew after 1960. These are two different people. You would think the Fatima industry, largely comprised of fake-traditionalists who support the FSSP or the SSPX, would be eminently interested in this research. But alas, they are not. Why? Because they know that their livelihood and grift relies on Vatican II being a true ecumenical council and the popes after Pius XII being true popes.
